Area Fire Departments reorganize and install their officers for 2016. Mayor and Councils express their faith in their Fire Departments, grateful for the services of their highly trained volunteers; stewards who maintain and operate expensive resources that can be counted upon to keep their communities safe in times of dangerous, chaotic, life-threatening emergencies. At this time, Fire Chiefs publicly express appreciation of their elected officials for their continued support; and the confidence of the men and women under their command. But deep down in the depths of their soul, a Fire Chief's prayer is to "bring them home safe."

Groundhog Day February 2

According to folklore, if 2, 1887. it is cloudy when a groundhog emerges from its burrow on this day, then spring will come early; if it is sunny, the groundhog will supposedly see its shadow and retreat back into its burrow, and the winter weather will continue for six more weeks.

Punxsutawney held its first Groundhog Day in the United States in the 1800s. The first official trek to Gobbler's Knob near, Punxsutawney, Pennsylvania, was made on February cartoons and other media have portrayed the legendary role of the groundhog in popular culture.

The term "Groundhog Day" is a phrase that is sometimes used to express if the same events or actions occur repetitively for a period of time.

Groundhog Day, already a widely recognized and popular tradition, received widespread attention as a result of the 1993 film "Groundhog Day." ###

Artful Thinking

By Artie Maglionico • Lodi Historian

The Return to Saddle River

You cannot write about Lodi History without mentioning one of the town's most popular citizens ... Mr. Ronald Giles. I have known Ron since 1959, when we played on opposing teams for what was Lodi's first organized Junior football league.

Ron, a member of the Lodi High School graduating Class of 1965, as I was, spent his 4 year run entertaining the student body with song and comedy. He has been entertaining us ever since on a much larger scale.

His attraction to the stage began as early as his 4th birthday when he and his mom went to see Nat King Cole perform at Palisades Amusement Park. From that moment on Ron knew what his calling was.

"I heard the laughter and applause," recalls Ron, "I knew right then that the stage was where I wanted to be."

Today Ron is known throughout the area for his tribute to Frank Sinatra and has recently teamed up with former Lodi resident guitarist Paul Speziale.

The talented Mr. Giles is a recent member of the Screen Actors Guild and has had parts in films such as "Brutal Massacre" with the late Gunnar Hansen of Texas Chainsaw Massacre fame.

A disabled Vet, who served both in Viet Nam and the Middle East, Ron does two shows a month at area Veterans' hospitals. Ron can be seen at jazz and cabaret clubs, restaurants, weddings, EMT organizations as well as The Lodi Memorial Library.

Ron has many of the same memories that I do. I'm not sure if he ever rafted down the Saddle River, but I'll bet he knows the kids who did. Among them were Johnny Rannou, Rocco Albano, Anthony Maglionico and your Artful Thinker. was spent sitting in the shade or, when we had the energy, venturing out to the gutter to burst tar bubbles. When that happened it wasn't long before you'd hear someone blurt out "Let's do something...summer is almost over!"

Johnny Rannou suggested that we take a walk down to the hot dog/hamburger joint that had recently opened up at the end of Contant Avenue, just above the river named the Cove which, by the way, was air conditioned. Air conditioning back in 1961 was still a rarity and businesses such as the Cove used to advertise using a large banner hung over the entrance that simply read in very bold print "Air Conditioned."

Johnny Rannou being the only kid on the block with a job, and since there were only four of us ... myself, Bruce, Rocco, and Anthony, offered to buy us all a small Coke. A small Coke set you back 10 cents. True, the glasses didn't hold much... but hey...Rannou was buying so who was going to complain.

The only problem was that we couldn't nurse our drinks in cool comfort since we were keeping other customers from sitting at the counter. "Hurry up you kids!" shouted the guy behind the counter. "If you're not going to get something to eat then finish up."

That request didn't set too well with Bruce who was known for nursing a bottle of soda. A Pepsi and a 10 cent bag of Wise Potato Chips lasted him all day. "Last time I'm coming to this place" he growled as he gulped down his soda. The Cove closed down the following winter.

"That's what they get for telling us to hurry up!" Bruce was known to have said.

Once outside, we walked onto the Route 46 Bridge and looked down at the river. There caught in the shallows was an abandoned wooden raft left to rot in the mid August sun. Upon noticing the raft, Johnny Rannou immediately suggested that we investigate. hind, hoping that Rocco could come up with something convincing enough to keep us from boarding the raft.

"You'll drown!" Not convincing enough. Moments later we were all standing on the river bank, Rocco included, looking at the raft that was stuck on a sand bar about 6 feet from shore.

On the deck was a thick rope half of which was dangling off the side and into the water. The problem arose as to who was going to brave the knee deep, murky brown waters of the Saddle River, board the raft and throw us the rope, so we could pull it to shore and climb on.

"Hey John, this was your idea," said Rocco, "why don't you throw us the rope?"

"No problem," replied Johnny Rannou, with a lit cigarette hanging from his mouth. "Let's do it!"

He emptied his pockets of all his valuables, including an unopened pack of Chesterfield cigarettes, and a book of matches and handed them over to Rocco. He then rolled up his pants and bravely entered the water.

"Ain't ya taking your sneakers off?" asked Bruce.

"You kidding?" Johnny Rannou replied "I don't know what I'm stepping on under there. Come to think of it, I don't want to know!"

No more than 5 steps into the river, and Rannou was in up to his waist.

"Good thing you rolled your pants up," laughed my cousin Anthony

Johnny Rannou gave a disgruntled smirk and turned away.

The water shallowed considerably as he approached the sand bar. Once there, he boosted himself onto the raft and told the rest of us, who were safe and dry on shore, to prepare to catch the rope. As he got to his feet we noticed that his sneakers were caked with thick, black mud. We couldn't see his sneakers at all ...all we could see were these two enormous globules of soggy mud attached to his ankles. "Alright," he said in an angry tone, "give me the rope."

He gave a couple of feeble tugs and then reminded the rest of us that we were all in this together. "Come on you guys," he shouted, "help me pull."

We all grabbed a section of the rope and began to tug. As we did it came to me and my cousin Anthony's attention that Rocco was the only one straining...the rest of us were just going through the motions.

Rocco had actually pulled that raft to shore by himself, with Johnny Rannou on board no less. His sneakers alone must have weighed 10 lbs each. Of course, we never told Rocco, not while we were standing so close to him any way!

"You coming Rocco?" I asked as I waited to climb aboard. Not surprisingly, Rocco paused for a moment and climbed aboard

"What the heck," he said as he boarded, "we might as well sail together."

Soon we were setting sail, five adventurous sailors on the "Bounding Main," or in this case, The Saddle River.

Once we were aboard "our gallant bark," my cousin Anthony picked up the long piece of timber that was laying, to keep with the nautical flavor, "amidships."

He used it to push the raft clear of the sand bar and out into the open river. Once we reached the deeper water, he used it to keep the raft steady. Let me tell ya friends, Huck Finn would have been proud of my cousin Anthony, as he steered us onto unknown waters.

This was definitely a river worthy raft...built, no doubt, by someone who had the right tools and knew how to use them. True it was a little weather beaten and in places somewhat warped but it was a sturdy vessel and it suited us well.

I'm not sure as to how big it was but it held the five of us with room to spare. The surface of the raft must have been closed in at one time, because there were remnants of a wooden railing which was held in place by posts that were still standing on each of the four corners. In the center of this floating vessel stood another wooden post only this one had to be at least 8 feet high, or so we surmised. At the top of the post were pieces of, what looked to be, faded black cloth which were fastened to the wood by silver nails the surfaces of which glittered in the sunlight. Rocco suggested that the ragged pieces of cloth must have been from what was once a flag of some sort. No sooner did we ponder Rocco's theory, when the raft came to an abrupt stop.

"What the heck did you hit?" asked Johnny Rannou.

"Was that a freaking refrigerator?" asked Rocco.

"No!" replied Anthony sarcastically, "it was an iceberg... abandon ship!"

Having survived our encounter with a household appliance, we continued to sail downstream at a friendly pace. The further we sailed downstream, the cleaner the river became. The river widened substantially as we approached the Arnot Street bridge, and as we sailed beyond it, we were pleasantly surprised as to how much cleaner the shore line was. There were dense trees on both sides of the river ,and the sounds of wild life emanating from them distanced us, if only psychologically, from the changes that were taking place in other parts of our world.

But just beyond the tree line could be seen the tall, deserted, red brick buildings that were once part of the largest textile mill in the U.S.A. The factories spread across the heart of Lodi, and as we passed, we could see in the distance, just off Arnot Street, the giant smoke stacks. During WWII, those same smoke stacks used to let loose with dense puffs of black, fiery smoke.

In front of the smoke stacks, closer to the bridge was a monster of a water tower... black in color with the bold white letters UPDW (United Piece Dye Works) painted across the belly of the tank.

We had passed that same water tower on foot hundreds of times during the course of our lives, but now we were seeing it from a different perspective.

Looking up at it from the raft the water tower seemed wider and taller than ever. It seemed to take on a life of it's own as if it was going to reach down and scoop us up as we drifted by.

No doubt about it we were awe struck by the size and magnitude of that black, ominous, looking tower, yet at the same time realizing that it had long since outlived its usefulness... the tank was empty!

It can be said that Johnny Rannou was a risk taker and because of this was first in many endeavors among them... smoking...wearing a baseball uniform...kissing a girl...(my cousin Johnny no doubt had him beat in that undertaking since he was 3 years older), having a paper route...and climbing on to a wooden raft on the Saddle River.

It was still in that summer of 1961...what was left of it. These were the "Dog Days" mid-August...little or no rain ... temperature in the 90s and very humid. Life on the street "I thought we were through with the river," said Rocco.

"We were through with frogging," answered Rannou, "not rafting."

"Come on Rocco," insisted Bruce, "lets have some fun... you only live once."

"Yea...I know," answered Rocco, "that's why I am not going ...you only live once!"

As Rocco spoke Johnny Rannou and Bruce had already made their way down to the river.

The rest of us lagged be-

"Hey Rannou!" shouted Rocco "I like your new sneakers."

The rope landed barely close enough for us to reach it. Bruce took a step or two into the water, picked up the rope and handed it to Rocco.

"What are you giving it to me for?" asked Rocco, "I ain't getting on that raft."

"You're the strongest," replied Bruce, "At least help us to pull it to shore."

Rocco was without a doubt the strongest of the group and at 11 years old, was already lifting 50 lb. sides of beef onto his father's chopping block. Further down we noticed a few kids fishing off of a cement pier, not with fishing poles, but with long, crooked tree branches with a line and hook attached to them.

"Catch anything?" Rocco called out.

"Yea," answered one of the kids as he held up an old muddy boot.

"Waddia gonna do if you catch the other boot?" laughed Johnny Rannou.

"Wear them to Church!" replied the same kid.

"Good idea!" yelled my cousin Anthony, "then you can save their soles."

We cringed over my cousin's play on words, as we continued on our journey down the river.

Up ahead, to our surprise, was another bridge. A dilapidated, wooden structure with trolley tracks going across it.

Until then we didn't know the bridge existed. We heard about a bridge located somewhere along the river that kids use to dive from, before the water became too polluted to swim in.

My older brother Eugene, who was already 18 years old, used to tell me stories about a swimming hole down the river that he and his friends used to frequent when they were younger. I was no more than 8 years old at the time, however, I did recall him mentioning something about a bridge that was used for jumping off of. I told the story to the others and we all agreed that this was the place my brother had spoken about.

Yea, the bridge was pretty beat up alright, and we couldn't wait to clear it in fear that the darn thing might collapse on top of us.

As we sailed away from that forgotten bridge I turned around to take another look at it. I didn't want to remember it being in such a rundown condition. I imagined, instead, how it must have looked in the early years when, it served a much needed purpose, getting UPDW workers across the river. It made me feel a little better about leaving it behind.

Just then Rocco noticed that Johnny Rannou had a couple of leaches attached to his calf while another one was having a meal on the back of his knee.

"Hey John," said Rocco calmly, "don't look now but you've got a few parasites on your legs."

"What you mean...parasites?!!" he replied nervously.

Bruce and me ran over to see what Rocco was talking about.

"Leeches," I said in amazement, "you got freaking leeches on the back of your legs."

with them."

Johnny Rannou caught the sight of blood dripping down the side of his calf. "Is that my blood?" he asked nervously.

"Well it ain't ours," replied Rocco, "thats for sure."

"Get those things off of my freaking leg," shouted Rannou, "I'm bleeding to death."

"We'll burn them off," said my cousin Anthony as he handed the 2 x 4 to Bruce. "Light up a cigarette."

Rocco, who was still holding on to Johnny Rannou's cigarettes, pulled one out of his shirt pocket, handed it to him along with the match book. Johnny lit it up took a long drag, exhaled and handed the cigarette to Anthony.

Anthony's first attempt was slightly off the mark, causing Johnny Rannou to shout out in pain. "Ouch," he yelled, "not me ...the leech!"

We all tried, unsuccessfully, to hold back our laughter which only added insult to injury...But we laughed all the more.

Finally all three of those blood suckers succumbed to the burning cigarette and had fallen into a lifeless heap onto the deck.

"You see?" said my cousin Anthony as he looked at the dead leeches. "Cigarettes are truly bad for your health!"

He then handed it back to Johnny Rannou who immediately took a deep and penetrating drag.

"Ah!" he sighed as he exhaled "so round...so firm...so fully packed...so friendly to the draw."

"And they're good for removing blood suckers too," chuckled Rocco.

Just then we all noticed that the raft had begun to pick up speed. Anthony grabbed the 2x4 out of Bruce's hands, and attempted to push the raft closer to shore ... into the shallows. The water was moving faster now the force of which snatched the timber from my cousin's grasp and knocked him to the floor.

Suddenly the raft had turned sideways and we were soon freewheeling downstream at a goodly pace, bouncing off of exposed boulders and downed trees along the way. We hung on for dear life as the raft rushed down stream out of control.

off now or go down with the ship, which was no decision at all. We were abandoning ship at all costs. Not 50 feet from the edge of the drop-off the river narrowed allowing us to make our way to the shoreline. Suddenly, we heard Rannou calling for help. We looked up to find him clutching desperately onto, of all things, a bathroom sink that was caught between two rocks at the edge of the waterfall. We ran along the muddy shoreline to the spot where Rannou was dangling. The raft had already gone over and was continuing its journey down the river without us...upside down. The only part that was left behind was the flag pole. It had broken off at the base of the raft and somehow managed to remain in an upright position at the side of the falls closest to us.

"Don't let go," I yelled to Rannou, who was holding on to the water spicket with both hands.

"Why didn't I think of that," he shouted back, "what would I do without you?"

"Don't be scared," said Anthony "It's only a 10 foot drop...but hang on anyway just in case."

"Just in case what?" Replied the panic stricken Rannou.

"Just in case we figure out a way to fish you out of there," shouted Anthony.

Rocco reached for the broken flag pole but it was just out of his reach.

"One of us is going to have to climb down and get it," said Rocco. "It's the only way we can get him to shore...he'll have to grab it and we can pull him in."

"Who's gonna climb down?" I asked.

My cousin Anthony being the lightest and the more flexible of the crew, volunteered.

The plan worked and we were soon able to extend the pole out to Rannou, and pulled him safely back to shore.

"Hey John...were ya scared?" asked Anthony.

"Darn right I was scared!" lied Rannou.

The raft then righted itself allowing us to get a decent look at what was lying ahead. It came to my attention that the river had seemed to disappear before my eyes ... which, and we all realized at the same time, meant that there was a waterfall in our future and we didn't need a crystal ball to let us know.

The closer we got the louder it got until finally we had to make a decision either to jump

"What were you thinking when you held on to that bathroom sink?" asked Anthony.

"I was wishing there was a toilet bowl next to it!" replied Johnny Rannou.

With that we headed back to the Arnot Street bridge, found our way to the road and walked up the hill to Westervelt Place, never again to return to the Saddle River.

Okay...so maybe it didn't happen exactly like that, but there was definitely a wooden raft. If you don't believe me then ask my cousin Anthony.

Super Bowl Party Tips

No matter which teams are playing, you should get the gang together, stock your fridge with all the food and drink that matter, and set up the television just right in order to appreciate America's most watched sports event.

• Without proper decorations, your Bowl bash will be incomplete.

Put up banners of the competing teams on your wall or hang streamers bearing the team colors. Get Super Bowl paper plates, tablecloths and other decorative things.

• Next to the excitement of the game itself, your party will be most remembered for the food provided. Your decorations may be great, but if the snacks and main dishes aren't hits, no one will be pleased.

The main meal should be tasty, simple and filling.

• Make it easy and cater your party. Check out the menus at Hasbrouck Heights Pizzeria. Order in advance since Super Bowl Sunday is one of the busiest nights for delivery-based restaurants.

• Set up the food in an assembly line so that everyone can customize their own dinner.

Stick to a buffet set-up in order to ease serving and eating. That way, everyone can enjoy the food while watching the game, and most importantly, you can too.

• If you want to impress, have a Super Bowl cake.

• To make clean up easier, use plastic cups, plates and utensils. Of course, napkins should be readily available so that, in the event of a spill, help is close by.

• Keep the beer in a cooler close by so you don't have to run to the fridge. Aside from the suds, have plenty of soft drinks and water on hand for the designated drivers.

• Avoid offering hard liquor on Super Bowl Sunday. Football is a sport that begs for beer, nothing else. Meadowland Wine and Liquor sells the coldest beer in town.

• Keep radios and even small televisions set up around the house so that wanderers and those serving food don't miss a single down. You can even put one in the john if your guests are real football fanatics.

• It's always fun to mix in a little video game action on Super Bowl Sunday. If the halftime show is dull, set up your Playstation 2 or Xbox, and play football. Select the teams that are actually playing in the the Super Bowl and square off for some extra fun.

• Some people like to add to the entertainment by organizing betting pools. Ideally, these games are done in a way that even the guests who don't know a thing about football can join in.

For instance, you can bet on who will score the next touchdown, what the score at the end of each quarter will be or even who'll win the coin toss.

Make charts or grids so that the wagers are clear and keep the pot low so that no one blows their wallet.

• Invest in a few foam "bad-call bricks" to throw at the TV so your guests can express their feelings about the refs without doing damage to your house.

• Keep a football around and throw some NFL magazines on the coffee table as good finishing touches.

• If it's a real manly, pokernight type night, pass cigars around. Make sure there are enough chairs for everyone to sit on. Provide a side room for those who came for the food and atmosphere, and not the actual game.

• Spray some air freshner around as soon as everyone leaves, so the smell of cigars does not linger.

• Think ahead and place garbage cans around your place so that wherever your guests are, they can find a place for their trash. At the end of the night, all you have to do is collect the garbage bags, instead of checking under the couch for crumpled napkins. • Organizing and hosting a Super Bowl party doesn't have to be time-consuming or stressful. Do it right, and you'll be able to watch the whole game, enjoy some great food and relax with your friends. ###

Rutherford Students Collect Toy Bear Holiday Gifts for Preschoolers

Student members of the Rutherford High School Future Business Leaders of America (FBLA) and Future Teachers of America (FTA) Clubs, under the direction of the advisor Mrs. Drewes, Mrs. Leonard, and Mrs. Nastasi, held a successful Bear Drive for pre-K students of Whitney M. Young Jr. School, PS 15 in Jersey City.

Contributions from students, teachers, and support staff enabled the Clubs to collect over 115 teddy bears. Upon arriving at PS 15, the RHS students were met by Mrs. Hoffman, pre-school teacher, and were told stories of the hardships that the children face on a regular basis.

Violence and tragedy permeate these young lives in ways that the RHS students could not even imagine. While these bears may seem insignificant to some, to these children they may represent the only gift they received during the holiday season. It was an experience that the students will not soon forget. One of the FBLA members, Jillian Davis, described the impact these bears had on the children, "These bears mean so much to the children, you can just see it on their faces."

Catherine Cassidy Authors Hasbrouck Heights Book

Telling a story in pictures is Hasbrouck Heights, the newest addition to Arcadia Publishing's popular Images of Modern America series.

The book, by local author, Catherine Cassidy, is for the Friends of the Hasbrouck Heights Public Library. The book boasts full color images, many of which have never been published, and showcases memories of days gone by.

Hasbrouck Heights was incorporated over 100 years ago as a farming community. However, the building of the railroad brought an influx of people, and this agricultural town located a few miles outside of Manhattan morphed into a commuter's dream.

The farms died out, and the postwar housing boom made Hasbrouck Heights into the Borough it is today.

During the last 50 years, the town has relatively stayed the same. Businesses may change, but the time-tested traditions that make up Hasbrouck Heights have stayed true. One can watch children paint the store windows for Halloween in autumn or attend the Easter egg hunt in spring. New traditions, like the inception of Town Day and the street fair, have sprung up as well and will continue for years.

All profits from the sale of the book are being donated to The Friends of the Library.

This 96 page softcover book will be available at The Hasbrouck Heights Free Public Library starting February 22, 2016. Price is $22.99.

This is Ms. Cassidy's second Arcadia book on Hasbrouck Heights. The first was published in 2006 and represented the early years. ###

Middle School Musical Filled with Fun and Nostalgia

Mrs. Erin Schneeweiss, who has been directing Hasbrouck Heights Middle School's plays for many years, selected a great one this school year. The musical comedy "Parents Just Don't Understand" was performed on December 11 and 12, 2015. The script was enjoyable, upbeat, wholesome and easy to stage. It allowed the flexibility to get many students to participate.

The plot centers on a family's road trip at the end of a school year. The leads were played by Ryan Quish, the father, Janet Stathem, the mother and their 14 year old son, Steven Kelly and 16 year old daughter, Katelyn Scannell. During their long trip everyone has lots of extra time to reminisce about the past year. We too can remember those family vacations when the youngsters were stuck in the backseat of your car for hours on end annoying each other, as well as annoying their parents.

On Wednesday, January 20, 2016, Wood-Ridge Intermediate Sixth Grade science students enjoyed a visit from the Liberty Science Center Traveling Scientist Program. Ms. Drudy, Wood-Ridge Intermediate School Science teacher, chose a cow eyeball dissection lesson for the students. The Gazette Newspaper

South Bergen's Largest Independent Newspaper

The play consists of a collection of hilarious scenes that families are going to be able to relate to. Here we see the father teaching his daughter how to drive; the mother trying to help the son pick out his school clothes; the family at their first funeral together; the father giving his son "The Talk;" the youngster interaction with their grand parents; and the daughter's dreams of a sweet sixteen birthday bash being crushed by her parents' bizarre party plans.

The middle school students did a great job singing, dancing and acting. The cast worked together to emphasis the point "You can pick your friends, but you can't pick your parents." Yet in the end it's the parents that you love the most, even if they "Just don't understand you!" Story by Peter Gallo Jr. ###

Selected excerpts from East Rutherford Mayor James L. Cassella's Annual Address given on January 1, 2016

Mayor James L. Cassella

I am honored today to have been sworn in, once again, as Mayor of East Rutherford; I thank the people for that honor.

As I begin my 32nd year on this governing body and as has been the case in my previous 31 years, we will face many challenges. We have had many successes but there is so much more to do and hopefully we have learned from some mistakes but one thing I can assure the people of East Rutherford is that I will address the many challenges we face with no less enthusiasm than I did on January 1st, 1985 when, with my father holding the Bible, I was first sworn into office as a member of this governing body.

Once again I have the privilege of welcoming back Councilmen George Perry and Jeffrey Lahullier. I thank them both for their past service and look forward to working with them along with all the Council members in 2016.

Thank you to Superior Court Judge, Honorable Peter Melchionne for issuing to me The Oath of Office.

As we end 2015 and enter 2016 we are saddened by the loss of former Mayor Jim Plosia who passed away last week. He sat in this chair for 26 years and on this council for 6 years. He was truly dedicated to the people of East Rutherford and personally helped so many.

Looking back at 2015 we did make great strides in our efforts to finalize an agreement with Triple Five; the developers of the American Dream project.

the frustration, I had not heard from them in months until just last week when I finally, after months of silence, I had an opportunity to meet with Tony Armlin, who leads the Triple 5 Group. The discussions were productive; I did receive an update on their progress plus a tour of the facility. I can say that after hearing about how they have progressed and seeing firsthand how much construction has taken place, it appears that the bond issues should be taking place soon but as I said, I would be reluctant to make any predictions. One thing I am sure of is that our professionals have been doing an outstanding job fighting for the people of East Rutherford; protecting the taxpayers. I have no doubt about their efforts going forward.

Financially we are in better shape than we have been in a while. We did see some financial benefits from new ratables in 2015 plus our tax collection rate was up over 98.5% and should be the same in 2016; however, we still need to be conservative in our spending and in our hiring practices plus our debt is higher than I believe it should be. We need to control costs and spend only when it is absolutely necessary. Having said that, in 2015, we, just 2 weeks ago, received an upgraded rating from Moody's. Their report was positive based on our "conservative" approach to the financial practices we have initiated. Hopefully that continues in 2016. I have to thank our CFO Anthony Bianchi for the fine job that he is doing.

Residential property taxes continue to be, except for Teterboro, the second lowest in Bergen County and well below the state average. Our municipal tax levy has not increased in 2 years but maintaining stable taxes has become more difficult with pension, employee and insurance costs escalating. For example, our pension costs have increased $100,000 for 2016. Plus we have the added burden of having to deal with court ordered tax appeal settlements.

As important as the American Dream project is and the effect it will have on East Rutherford, it is not the only issue that will have a major effect on us. Density housing can affect us as much as, if not more, than American Dream.

We have been saddled with numerous applications for this type of housing. In some areas it may make sense but, for sure, in many areas it makes no sense whatsoever, especially in the Meadowlands District where we have no control over and certain areas of Carlton Hill. We have objected strongly in writing and in person to the NJSEA, expressing our opposition to this type of development. I can assure the people of East Rutherford that I will continue to express my opposition to these developments whether in the Meadowlands or in other areas of town where density housing is not appropriate and take the fight as far as we legally can to try to stop them; however, we must continue to keep in mind and understand that we are still under a court order that allows planning and zoning decisions to be overturned by the court appointed master. It doesn't matter whether the action taken was by one of our local boards or the NJSEA. We need to walk a fine line because of the court order and because of regulations set up by the Council on Affordable Housing known to all of us as COAH. It should also be pointed out that these developments do bring in substantial tax dollars. Although we were against it, the Monarch development located just off of Route 3, approved by the Meadowlands Commission, now part of the NJ Sports and Exposition Authority, brought in close to a million dollars in 2015 and the recently approved Sterling development is projected to bring in approximately $700,000 dollars. The question is, of course, even though monies from these sides and it is distressing and frustrating when these bodies do nothing to correct the situation. What makes it so frustrating? Well, start with the fact that it has been forty years since the first Supreme Court ruling on affordable housing, known as the "Mount Laurel Decision" was decided and we are still arguing about what the solution to this issue should be; it has been almost 10 years that we have been under a court order and you have the Fair Housing Council challenging every reasonable solution. This is not government's finest hour. In the meantime, we are trying to establish a feasible development plan with one hand tied behind our back. There is no reason to expect any conclusion to the affordable housing issue any time soon but I am still hoping to work with the Council to put in place some type of plan.

We can continue to voice our objections to these types of housing developments but that does nothing to legally stop them, we need to do more. Although difficult to stop entirely because of the court order and the affordable housing issues I do believe we can have more control if we would take seriously the idea of initiating redevelopment plans in the areas that we have designated as "in need of redevelopment." We have been presented with plans prepared by a professional planner but we have not addressed them. What has been presented to us are not etched in stone and can be changed so if the council disagrees with a professional planner and wants to change it they can but we need to act. We need to stop the politics and start addressing this issue in a professional and realistic manner that benefits the people of East Rutherford.

In 2015 our ongoing road program continued with a number of streets in the process of being resurfaced and in some areas problematic sewer lines and sidewalks replaced. This program will continue in 2016. Also and at last, Stanley Street was completed as was the upgrades at the Hackensack Street entrance to Riggin Field.

Thanks to Councilman Brizzi for all his efforts in arranging these concerts and for the donations received that offset much of the costs. The concerts, along with the Columbus Week-End festivities, organized by the Civic Pride Committee, bring a positive image to our community. Thanks to all who were involved for their hard work in organizing these events.

We continue to pursue, with Rutherford, acquiring the former railroad line bordering the two municipalities. We have been trying to obtain permission from North Fork Southern to allow our environmental engineer's access to the property so they can give us an estimated cost for an environmental cleanup of the property which needs to be done before it can be purchased. We need this environmental study done before we can move forward. Councilman Lahullier put much effort into this in 2015 and is hopeful for some positive results in 2016.

During the past year we have entered into 2 shared service agreements; the establishment of a shared building department with Carlstadt and Rutherford and a shared service agreement with Rutherford for the purchase of gasoline.

Also, in 2015 we purchased a new senior bus and have upgraded our website. Thank you to Councilman Homaychak for overseeing the website upgrade.

We continue to upgrade our equipment in all our departments which allows us to better serve and protect our community; in many cases using grant money or forfeiture money to offset the expense for taxpayers.

We have so many wonderful volunteers and board members who dedicate their valuable time. Thank you to each and every one of them and thank you to our Veterans, especially for their service defending this great nation of ours but also for their continuing service to our community

Although we are close, there are still some outstanding issues. If it seems as if I have been talking about this project on New Year's Day for the last twelve to thirteen years, going back to the Xanadu project; it is because I have. There has been much frustration but I do believe something should be happening soon; however, negotiating with Triple Five has been very difficult and I cannot make any promises about when this agreement might be finalized or when we might start receiving the tens of millions of dollars that have been agreed to. Just to emphasize

Right now we have an ongoing appeal in the federal courts filed by the Federal Reserve Bank which is becoming quite costly but conversely, in an unusual situation, we have filed a tax appeal against the owners of the office building next to the Hilton on Route 3. The basis for our claim is that the office building's assessment which was ordered by the court, is too low based on what it was recently sold for. We will continue to fight for what we believe are fair assessments.

projects are substantial do they offset any services that are required?

What makes this so much more difficult is that because of inaction by the state legislators, the governor's office and COAH, the affordable housing issue is, once again, back in the courts. Our municipal attorney, Richard Allen, has been doing an excellent job defending us and our position but it has become an impossible situation that has left not just us but all the municipalities in the State of New Jersey in a terrible position in trying to move forward with development and, worse yet, it is has been very costly to the taxpayers. Home rule is being attacked from all

The summer concert series were once again a great success especially on our "National Night Out" which was the same night as one of the concerts.

Thank you to our Police Department and Neighborhood Watch for an outstanding job. This past September, on 2 consecutive late summer Thursday evenings, Councilman Brizzi arranged to have concerts at our 911 Park on Park Avenue. That, along with our summer concerts series and with the weather cooperating, our residents were treated to some great entertainment.

Our Veterans of Foreign Wars now have a new home with the completion of the renovations to the former court offices. A dedication was held in 2015.

Please remember in your thoughts and prayers all of those many friends who were, in some way, a part of East Rutherford, some older and some way too young, including former Mayor Jim Plosia and former volunteer firemen, Ed Neubauer and Ronnie Coldon who have passed on.

Happy New Year and God Bless You.

Solar Panels Pros & Cons

You're seeing more and more of them appear in our Bergen County neighborhoods. Solar Panels.

They derive clean, pure energy from the sun, they combat greenhouse gas emissions and reduce our collective dependence on fossil fuel. And they save money: installing solar panels will reduce your electricity bill and might even provide you income by generating power you can sell to the utility.

But installing solar panels on your house can often cost well over $20,000 and many homeowners today turn to leasing programs to avoid these upfront costs.

Most leases are for 20 years, and that can present a real problem if you decide to sell your house before the lease is completed.

Statistics show that the average home in our area sells every 5 to 7 years. That means that a potential buyer for your home equipped with solar panels is buying not only the house, but a lease obligation as well.

Quick story: local home sellers we represented recently were entirely happy with the leased solar panels they installed a few years back.

When they decided to sell, we found them a buyer who also appreciated the environmental and financial benefits of solar panels. But then there was a hitch just as the sale was about to go through. The buyers all of a sudden disclosed that they hadn't really looked at the solar lease (though they were given a copy at the outset) and didn't like the fact that the lease was going to continue for another 15-16 years.

In last-minute negotiations, the sellers' attorney advised a $10,000 credit to the buyer in exchange for him assuming the balance of the lease.

In this case, you could argue that those leased solar panels on the roof reduced the value of the seller's home.

For those people who own (as opposed to lease) rooftop power systems, solar adds value to the home - that, at least according to studies funded by the U.S. Energy Department ("about $25,000 for the average installation in California").

But leased systems are another story because they're considered personal property rather than a part of the house.

For many potential buyers, a solar lease is a liability rather than an asset; they may not wish to continue using the panels, which are certain to become technologically outdated as time goes on, if they even still work...

Solar leases were introduced in 2008 and only started to take off a couple of years ago. As much as 70% of the residential systems being installed now are financed through leases, according to GTM Research.

Most of the systems in place remain in the hands of the original customer, suggesting the difficulties in selling these properties are just beginning.

"Some buyers just won't be on board" (with assuming a solar lease), said an analyst with Bloomberg News. "Even if you save money every month, you limit yourself to a certain subset of buyers."

But SolarCity Corp., the biggest name in solar installation and backed by billionaire Elon Musk, doesn't think there will be a problem.

"They (homebuyers) are essentially moving into a home with a lower cost of ownership, a lower cost of energy," said a spokesman for the California firm. "It becomes a selling point instead of a point of misunderstanding."

Maybe so. But it's an issue that we in the real estate industry are - increasingly - grappling with now: how to value homes with energy efficient systems.

It seems to come down to how these projects are paid for. Asking a potential buyer to take over a 20-year obligation is, I think frankly, asking a lot. Buying puts the onus on the current owner, but could increase the value of the home.

There just isn't, yet, a long history of sales involving such homes....

Passion to be presented at Most Sacred Heart of Jesus Church

Most Sacred Heart of Jesus Church, 127 Paterson Avenue, Wallington, will host the Relics of the Passion program on Thursday, February 18, 2016 at 7 p.m. in an event designed to connect participants to the roots of their faith.

The event is sponsored by Most Sacred Heart of Jesus Church, in collaboration with the Apostolate for Holy Relics. The Apostolate is guardian for more than 1,200 relics organized into special collections, such as the 8 rare relics that make up Relics of the Passion.

It is rare to see a group of related holy relics all in one place as is presented in this program. Collections such as this are generally seen only in Rome or the Holy Land.

The relics are used to bring together a unique program of mediations and prayers commemorating the events relative to each relic and its significance in the Passion of Our Lord, Jesus Christ.

The documents for these relics have been reviewed and authenticated prior to the first tour in 2007. The Relics have Tours are generally scheduled only during the Lenten season and are limited by the travel availability of the members of the Apostolate.

A presentation of the Relics of the Passion may only be seen in a given geographic area once, and very less likely twice or more times, in a lifetime.

The 8 relics include: a piece of the True Cross; a piece of the table from the room where the Last Supper took place; a piece of the Column of Flagellation; a piece of the Crown of Thorns; a replica fashioned using the filings from the true nails of the cross; a relic from the head of St. Longinus, the centurion who pierced the side of Christ while he was hanging on the cross; a picture of (of the effigy of) the Veil of Veronica: and the final relic is Sindonis D.N.J.C., which is the exterior wrapping that the Shroud of Turin was rolled in when it was being venerated.

Most Sacred Heart of Jesus Church has been designated by the Archdiocese of Newark as a Pilgrimage Church during the Year of Mercy.

Everyone is invited to attend this very memorable and moving program. For additional information, please contact Carol at 201-935-0273. ###

A Reason to Smile

Replacing missing teeth can radically improve a person's smile and quality of life. Whether you're young, old, or in-between, dentures can help improve the way you look, feel, eat, and speak. It can even help your self-confidence.

What is a denture?

A denture is a custommade removable replacement for missing teeth and adjacent tissues. It is made of acrylic resin, sometimes in combination with various metals. A full or complete denture replaces all of the teeth, while a partial denture fills in the spaces created by missing teeth and prevents other teeth from changing position.

What causes tooth loss?

Patients can become entirely edentulous (without teeth) due to many reasons, the most prevalent being removal because of dental disease (e.g., periodontal disease and tooth decay). Other reasons include tooth developmental defects caused by severe malnutrition, genetic defects, trauma, or drug use.

Who needs a denture?

Both younger patients and older patients can be fitted for dentures.

Candidates for complete dentures have lost most or all of their teeth. A partial denture is suitable for those who have some natural teeth remaining. Dentures can help patients in a number of ways, including:

• Mastication—chewing ability is improved by replacing edentulous areas with dentures.

• Aesthetics—the presence of teeth provides a natural facial appearance. Wearing a denture to replace missing teeth provides support for the lips and cheeks, correcting the collapsed appearance that occurs after losing teeth.

• Phonetics—replacing missing teeth helps improve pronunciation of syllables and vowels.

• Self-esteem—patients feel better about themselves.

How do you care for dentures?

A denture is fragile, so it is important to handle it with care. Remove and brush the denture daily, preferably with a brush designed specifically for cleaning dentures, using a denture cleanser. Never use harsh, abrasive cleansers, including toothpastes, because they may scratch the surface of the denture, leaving it susceptible to plaque and stains.

Don't sterilize your denture with boiling water because it will cause it to become warped. If you wear a partial denture, be sure to remove it before brushing your natural teeth.

Why do I have to clean my dentures?

Keeping your dentures clean is vital for good oral health and overall health. Like natural teeth, dentures attract plaque, become stained, and collect food particles that can cause bad breath or irritate your gums.

Should dentures be worn at night?

If you're new to wearing dentures, your dentist may advise you to wear it almost constantly during the first two weeks—even while you sleep. Under normal circumstances, however, it is considered best to remove it at night. Removing the denture at night allows the gum tissue to rest and allows normal stimulation and cleansing by the tongue and saliva.

Clean your dentures in cleanser solution, as directed by your dentist. When not in use, you should soak your dentures in water. Get in the habit of keeping the denture in the same safe and handy place to reduce the likelihood of misplacing it.

How often should I see my dentist?

It is important to continue having regular dental checkups so your dentist can examine your oral tissues for signs of disease or cancer. As you age, your mouth will continue to change. To maintain a proper fit over time, it may be necessary to adjust or possibly remake your denture. Never attempt to adjust a denture yourself. When in doubt, consult your dentist.

February, it is cold and dreary and everyone is waiting for the weather to warm. Well it is nothing new in New Jersey.

For anyone studying history, the winter's effects can be seen in the movements of troops. The colder months in the northern states during the Revolutionary War show large scale troop movements slow down.

Moving through the snow is difficult to do. Getting forage for the horses and oxen as well as supplies of food and winter clothes for the men become the main problems. One of the reasons the war shifts from the northern states to the southern states, I always thought, had something to do with cold winters in the north.

Certainly not the only reason but with the British Generals stationed in a cold New York City basically idle till spring, I figured it was natural for them to think about where they could conduct operations.

History shows they decided to take the southern colonies back from American hands. So, main operations shifted south. There wasn't much snow but they soon found that the southern colonies had their own type of environment that would prove not much easier to operate in. In the south British troops found stifling heat, deep dark swamps and miserable bogs and wet land. They also found plenty of armed patriots. They might have wished they were stuck with the snow.

The British captured Savannah, Georgia on December 29, 1778. To take control of all of Georgia they also captured Augusta, Georgia. The reader would note that the idea here with the British movements is to take control of the southern colonies, but also they expected a large population of southerners to join their ranks and stamp out the rebels and end the Revolution. That was a good plan as long as you're near the water and you have a large navy to support your movements, this would work. But Georgia is a big land area and there are places where sloops and battleships and barges can't go. Far from the ocean, the British soldier found himself on equal footing with the local patriots to fight it out rifle to rifle in the bogs and dark swamps of the back country, just as the American patriots wanted. British Brigadier General Augustine Prevost took command of Savannah and as planned immediately wanted the locals to join the British cause. He sent Lt. Colonel Archibald Campbell to take Augusta and recruit new men for the cause and he did so.

Campbell also sent Colonel John Boyd into the North and South Carolina interior to recruit more men. Boyd did well for himself, collecting over 600 loyalists.

These men had a grand time on the march. Acting like fools instead of soldiers, they robbed and plundered their neighbors that took the side of the American cause. Looting and robbing ultimately worked against the British cause. Anyone that was robbed, certainly would never be coaxed back to the British side.

Colonel John Dooly was an American patriot. He and his men were on the north side of the Savannah River. He joined his men with Colonel Andrew Pickens. They had over 300 men and they were planning to cross the Savannah and conduct operations in Georgia.

On February 10, 1779, they crossed the river and attempted to attack a British camp not far from Augusta. When they reached the campsite they found that the British had left. The British ran to Carr's Fort, a small stockade in the Georgia frontier.

Pickens set up a siege to force them to surrender, but he soon received news that Boyd and his Loyalists were moving through southern South Carolina attempting to reach Augusta. Now what would you do? Drop the siege for a chance to take the larger force of the enemy? Or stick with the siege to capture the sure prize?

Pickens decided to drop the siege and attempted to catch up with Boyd and his larger force. He knew that Boyd and his men would have to cross the river to get into Georgia so he set up his men at the mouth attack on the camp as Colonel Dooly and his men would circle the right flank and Lt. Colonel Elijah Clarke with his Georgians would circle the left flank. The flanks would move in behind the camp to prevent any loyalist from escaping and they would all be captured or killed.

On February 14, 1779, Colonel John Boyd had posted guards as is proper for any military encampment. Pickens sent forward his scouts and the scouts exchanged gunfire with the guards. This gunfire put the camp on alert.

Surprise was now out of the question but Pickens pressed forward with the attack. Colonel Boyd, now aware of Pickens' approach, formed a battle line close to the creek and moved forward to oppose Pickens.

As the two lines converged the battle was hotly contested. The flash of musketry and gunpowder smoke filled the air as wounded and dead men covered the ground. Dooly's men and Clake's men had trouble moving through the swamp to circle the Loyalist position but as Pickens' men drove back the Loyalist line the flankers emerged from the trees.

Colonel John Boyd was mortally wounded and command of the Loyalists fell to his second in command, William Spurgen. Spurgen rallied his men and the battle raged on. The loyalists now realizing they are surrounded; many decided it was time to make an escape.

Retreating Loyalists ran across Kettle Creek in the rear of their position to flee. Colonel John Dooly seeing this charged forward with some of his men and killed or captured many of them. He also had his horse shot from under him.

The Loyalist position collapsed from the patriot attack on all sides. Loyalists ran through the swamps to escape. Seventy of them were dead at the Creek and the wounded with those that surrendered were now prisoners. The battle of Kettle Creek was over. A great American victory.

interior was going to be not as easy as they wished.

The battle was also American against American. The Loyalists lived here before the war just like the patriots. The only difference was which side they took.
